Hiring a Private Pay Caregiver can be beneficial to families that have elderly parents or loved ones that live alone or need assistance while the rest of the family is away either to work or on vacations. Most private pay caregivers are Certified Home Health Aides with many years of experience caring for older adults living with Dementia, Cancer, Parkinson's Disease, Mobility, Hearing or Vision disabilities. The responsibilities of a private aide or caregiver can vary from client to client, but may include assisting with personal care, medication reminders, meal preparation, house cleaning, running errands, scheduling and accompanying to medical appointments, part-time or full-time care, including overnight or live-in care just to mention a few.

Having a caregiver around helps decrease depression, loneliness, falls, hunger, incidents, and hospitalizations. And now thanks to AIDECAS T recently launching the home care marketplace, hiring a caregiver in your community has gotten easier.
