Woligo was designed for small business owners and independent workers – people who traditionally are challenged with finding insurance solutions to protect their business and even themselves.

“As a new TAHC&H partner, we were excited to have Woligo’s attendance at the conference this year. Our new partnership with them is already resulting in new and exciting conversations about how their solutions can help TAHC&H members and their businesses,” said TAHC&H Director of Member Recruitment Becky Campbell.

Most recently, Woligo team members attended the Texas Association for Home Care and Hospice 53rd Annual Meeting in Round Rock, Texas, which included over 200 attendees representing more than 100 companies

"It was a pleasure to meet with TAHC&H business owners and members to discuss challenges facing their industry and how Woligo can help," said Brian Mauck, Venture Manager, on behalf of Woligo. "Our broad range of benefit and risk solutions brings members a single source provider who not only understands the healthcare industry but understands how to help them address financial risks they or their business may be exposed too."

The Texas Association for Home Care and Hospice headquarters are in Austin, Texas, where they work to give home care and hospice providers a strategic pathway to key state lawmakers and health care regulators. For more information visit <https://tahch.org/home>
