“The Sun Sentinel recommends Gregg Weiss for District 2 on the Palm Beach County Commission.” In their endorsement, the Sun Sentinel agreed with Gregg’s top priorities, “Gregg Weiss, an incumbent, represents the central county district that includes West Palm Beach and Lake Worth. He lists housing, water, and economic development as the commission’s main priorities. No argument there,” The Sun Sentinel, 9-27-2022.

“I am honored that the Sun Sentinel recognized my work over the last four years for the residents of Palm Beach County. Since my election four years ago, I have focused on getting results through good policy. We have made progress, but there is more left to do, which is why I’m running for re-election,” Commissioner Gregg Weiss.

While on the Commission, Gregg supported policies that increased workforce and affordable housing options, expanded broadband across Palm Beach County, and cut taxes for the first time in fifteen years.

Gregg’s website includes more details on his record and priorities for the next four years - www.VoteGreggWeiss.com.

Gregg and his wife of 31 years, Rebecca, retired in their 40s and decided to sail the world on their 50-foot boat named Kimba. After doing so for several years, they anchored in the Lake Worth Lagoon in 2004 and decided to make West Palm Beach their new home. Gregg Weiss was born and raised in Southern California. After graduating from the University of California at Irvine with degrees in Economics and Social Ecology, he made a career in the then-emerging computer industry. Gregg worked to become a business executive overseeing sales, marketing, and strategy for several Fortune 500 companies.
