"French Film" is a melancholic alternative pop ballad driven by a sincere, yet powerful, electric guitar intro, with a building chorus that knocks you off your feet, makes you want to sway along, and then surprises you at the end with a stylistic twist. The lyrics take you through the emotions following a heartbreaking loss of love. Vaughn's heartfelt vocals and performance are powerful and empathetic. The song is wrapped up with vivid literal imagery, telling a story much like a film, and anyone who has grieved the loss of an important relationship will surely relate.

As Emilia explains, " 'French Film' tells the story of a close friend of mine who painfully lost so much love in her life all at once - not only boys who treated her poorly, but also the death of a treasured family member. The emotional ballad is almost a cry for help from those who experience similar heartbreak and loss. I wanted people to have something to connect with when they are going through painful moments in their lives, and I hope this song helps people accept and cope with loss." - Emilia Vaughn
