Francis Nguyen is an innovative Canadian artist, recently interviewed by the Art magazine NYARTLIFE. A creative whose realistic figurative art places the realistically portrayed human figure at the center of his artistic work. Portraits of him are strikingly depicted as portraits, figure studies, nudes, and scenes in which man and humans are at the center of the work. His art is revered for the sensitive representation of the emotions that capture the human experience. Realistic and conceptually provocative figurative.

They have a modern sensibility and vibrant colors with an old master's attention to detail. The results are beautiful and compelling paintings with universal themes that people relate to. Francis is a complete artist, he dominates artistic techniques so much that he can represent any form that appears before his senses, achieving remarkable results in the portrait. Francis is endowed with human qualities, the ability to investigate the psychology of his subjects, and he can artistically return the soul of the subject he portrays, which can go beyond simple literal similarity.

Almost metaphysical aspects emerge in his works of art that can interest any viewer. Francis has an artistic maturity such as stimulating identification with those who relate to the work. In an empathic analysis of his artistic work, his culture, his vision, and his independence of representation are evident. His portrait works convey that universality that makes them timeless, transforming them into a life lesson for anyone who observes it.
