Secondly, the increasing disposable incomes of people has led to the growth of architectural white marble market. People are now willing to spend more on luxury items such as white marble for their homes. This is because white marble adds a touch of sophistication and elegance to any space.

Thirdly, the easy availability of raw materials is another driver for the growth of architectural white marble market. The geographical distribution of raw materials is quite favorable for the manufacturers as most of the raw materials are found in countries like Italy, Turkey, and China. This easy availability ensures timely supply of raw materials to the manufacturers which in turn helps in meeting the growing demand from consumers.

Regional Outlook:

The architectural white marble market is segmented into five key regions: North America, Europe, Asia Pacific, Middle East & Africa, and South America.

North America is anticipated to be the leading market for architectural white marble owing to the presence of a large number of construction projects in the region. According to the National Stone, Sand & Gravel Association, the total value of construction put in place in the U.S. in 2015 was $XX Billion. This is expected to increase to $XX Billion by 2020. The rise in construction spending is likely to result in increased demand for architectural white marble products in North America.

Europe is another major market for architectural white marble due to the presence of a large number of historical buildings and monuments that are made from this material. Some of the most famous landmarks constructed from marble include the Parthenon in Greece and St. Peter's Basilica in Vatican City. The restoration and renovation of these landmarks is expected to drive the demand for architectural white marble products in Europe over the forecast period.

The Asia Pacific region is also expected to be a key market for architectural white marble due to the increasing construction activity in countries such as China, India, and Japan. Global Institute, China and India are expected to account for 50% of all global infrastructure spending between 2010 and 2030. This is likely to result in increased demand for architectural white marble products in Asia Pacific over the forecast period.
