Beth Clay, ICA Executive Director

In addition to his the most recent award, Dr. Hulsebus was inducted into the Fellows of the International Chiropractors Association in 2013. In 2021, Palmer College honored him with the Bright Beacon Award. In 2022, he was honored again by the ICA with the ICA Legislative Leadership Award, named the "Bob Hulsebus" award after his grandfather.

ICA Executive Director, Beth Clay stated, "Dr. Brant Hulsebus is truly a beacon of light in the chiropractic profession in Illinois. In addition to his community activity, as our Assembly Representative, he consistently engages at the state and federal level with legislators and policy makers. He continually steps up to engage with ICA membership, particularly with our Student ICA members, which is appreciated by one and all."

Dr. Hulsebus continues the 70-year family tradition of principled chiropractic at Hulsebus Rockford Chiropractic in Rockford, Illinois.

About the ICA: The International Chiropractors Association (ICA) was founded in 1926 by Dr. B.J. Palmer. Following in his vision as the 'Developer' of the chiropractic profession and the professions' first global ambassador, ICA is dedicated to the growth and development of the chiropractic profession worldwide. The ICA then known as the Chiropractic Health Bureau, and its members worked in the early years of the organization to achieve appropriate legal status in every U.S. state and to defend chiropractors and chiropractic in the process. ICA continues to address state laws, regulations and policies as needed to protect and promote the profession. ICA is a founding member of the World Federation of Chiropractic.

In the United States, nationally, ICA is recognized as the moderate voice of chiropractic focused on the preservation and promotion of the science, art, and philosophy of chiropractic as the integral guideposts to carry the profession forward as a leading force in health care worldwide. ICA leadership and members are among those who have led the evolution of healthcare in the 21st century to one that is focused on health promotion, not simply disease prevention. We are focused on improving and expanding the body of clinical and basic science research; in practice-based outcomes research; and in advancing the knowledge base of the whole person effect of regular chiropractic care.

Internationally, the ICA works with our colleagues to support advances in the profession at a global scale, and when invited by associations, organizations, or governments, to assist in the development of the profession at a country level.

In 2022 and going forward, we continue our work to remove barriers to access and bring an end to the unequal treatment of chiropractors in healthcare systems worldwide. The ICA and its 501(c)(3) charity organization, the Foundation for the Advancement of Chiropractic Tenets and Science (FACTS) are registered NGOs with the United Nations.

ICA has endorsed US House Bill HR 8701 the Chiropractic Act of 2022 which will provide the needed corrections to Medicare law so that Medicare Beneficiaries who have paid into the system and who choose chiropractic care, will be treated equitably in coverage decisions.
