There has been a shift in consumer buying behavior in the past few years. This shift has led to an increase in online purchases of products. Players manufacturing decanters are now adopting omnichannel approach and have ventured to sell their products online. These players are actively engaging on their own company websites as well as other ecommerce platforms such as

Amazon, Walmart, and Target. The sale of decanters via online channels has witnessed an upsurge in the recent years. The ease of buying, wide selection of products, doorstep delivery, and ease of payment are attracting more customers toward these channels. The increase in sales via online channels will continue to grow in the near future, and provide lucrative opportunities for the engaged stakeholders in the decanter market.
