The growth of the France luxury travel market is attributable to large number of luxury travel companies switching to new age technologies. This is to boost the luxury travel status and delivering guests with state of the art facilities. Oculus rift-virtual reality device, Amazon eco-artificial intelligence, Go pro-wearable technology, and DaVinci 3D printing are some of the advanced technologies launched for the customers to enhance their travel experience. Growth in the number of HNIs population and rise in aspirations of young and rich millennial are expected to majorly foster the market growth in the region. Surge in interest of people to explore new places and to have unique travel experiences have encouraged market players to offer trips that connect the travelers to the local culture of the destination and explore the unknown acquaintance of the place and its people. However, changing socio-economic conditions threatens the France luxury travel market growth.

The France luxury travel market is segmented on the basis of type of tour, age group, and type of traveler. Based on type of tour, the market is categorized into customized and private vacations, adventure and safari, cruise/ship expedition, small group journey, celebration and special event, and culinary travel and shopping. Based on the age group the market has been categorized into 21 to 30 years, 31 to 40 years, 41-60 years, Above 60 years. Based on type of traveler, the market is classified into absolute luxury, aspiring luxury, and accessible luxury.

By type of tour, the adventure and safari segment holds majority of the France luxury travel market share. The segment is expected to continue its leading market position, during the forecast period, owing to the increased interest of people to explore new and exciting experiences while traveling.

Based on the France luxury travel market forecast by age group, 41-60 years segment is estimated to be the fastest growing market in the overall luxury travel market. However, the 21-30 years segment was the fastest growing segment in 2020. The growth of this segment in the France luxury travel market can be attributed to growing aspiration of travel and luxury through social media.
