In terms of material, the biodegradable paper and plastic packaging market has been classified into paper, plastic, and others. The paper segment is expected to dominate the market in 2020 owing to the high recyclability of paper products. However, the plastic segment is anticipated to grow at the highest CAGR during the forecast period due to its superior properties such as light weight and flexibility.

COVID-19 Scenario:

The outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic has created a significant demand for biodegradable paper and plastic packaging products, as these are considered to be more hygienic than traditional packaging materials.

In particular, there has been a surge in demand for sanitary products such as face masks and gloves, which are typically packaged in disposable plastic bags. However, with the increased awareness of the environmental impact of plastic pollution, many consumers are now opting for biodegradable alternatives.

This trend is expected to continue in the post-COVID-19 world, as consumers become more conscious of the need to reduce their impact on the environment.
