Fresh fruits are frequently used to make fruit juices. However, a number of juice producers have begun adding avocado purees to fruit juices to give them a smooth mix and improve the beverage's thickness. The demand for avocado puree is rising in the juice industry since it preserves all of the juice and a significant portion of the naturally occurring fibrous material in the fruit. The demand for avocado purees will rise in conjunction with the increase in the use of purees in juices. Fruit juices are created using a variety of purees, including mango, strawberry, apple, passion fruit, and others. Numerous businesses are introducing smoothie and juice products made from avocado purees in powder form with additional minerals and nutrients in North America and Europe.
