With over ten years of jazz guitar training and a penchant for indie bedroom pop production, Leah Jean harnesses a one-of-a-kind sound.”

Music Mecca Magazine

Jean focuses on creating lyrics that are immersive, portraying her experiences while also connecting with her audience.

While her style embodies the timeless tone of country and Americana, there's another side to her music, which allows soul and jazz influences to shine through.

'Creatures In The Room' instantly sounds like a classic record. The eleven original songs on the album explore many personal and existential topics. The dark and moody single “Stalker” deals with the pain of depression and anxiety, while Jean’s cover of Kacey Musgraves’ “Slow Burn” highlights her love of Americana and Pop music. With every song, Jean set out to explore a new idea or theme. From relationships and expectations (“Electric Blue”) to losing friends (“Friend Like You”) and matters of the heart (“Mirror”), this album is one of the artist’s most personal projects to date. Not only are the lyrics emotionally eloquent, but the instrumentals also do their part. The jazz-inspired chords that drive the guitar arrangements add a unique flavor to the Americana footprint of the album; the mesmerizing soundscapes allow the audience to empathize with the content of every song. Fans of artists as diverse as Gillian Welch, Ani DiFranco, Stevie Nicks, The 1975, Lianne La Havas, Francis Moon, and Phoebe Bridgers are sure to connect with Jean’s latest studio effort, ‘Creatures In The Room.’
