“

“Missouri is an amazing state, with a more than 200-year distilling history.”

Mark Sutherland, CEO

Stowloch Whiskey is a premium whiskey distilled in the Ozark Highlands using long fermentation, all-natural, chemical free water, Missouri-made barrels, and aged at least 4 years. The name comes from the 7th century Anglo-Saxon word “stow” and the Gaelic word “loch.” Loosely translated, it means “holy water.”

“Every whiskey drinker knows that ‘holy water’ is an appropriate name for their favorite whiskey,” Sutherland said.

Inverton Vodka is an 8-times-distilled premium vodka, started with long fermentation and finished using vacuum inverted distillation. The name is a tribute to the adventurers and innovators who take action and redefine what is possible, and push the edge in everything they do because Adventure Favors the Bold.

Stowloch and Invertion are scheduled for launch in late 2022 and early 2023.

Sutherland is a Scottish native, raised in England, and adopted by Missouri. His career has seen him support organizations and governments across Missouri and overseas. Most recently he was the CMO of Missouri Partnership, an organization tasked with promoting Missouri and attracting job-creating business investment into the state. He currently serves as a GlobalScot, assisting Scottish companies with their US market entry, as the British Hon. Consul to Missouri, supporting and strengthening the special relationship between the UK and Missouri, and as the President of the Ozark Highland Distillers Guild, a consumer-protection organization. He holds a BS in Global Leadership from Washington University in St. Louis and a PGCert in Marketing from King's College London.

"Missouri is an amazing state, with a more than 200-year distilling history," Sutherland said. "It was an honor to attract investment to the state over the past 7 years, and now I have the privilege of leading the Missouri-born Stone Ledge Spirits Company. It is a thrill to be able to grow this fantastic company in our state, create new jobs and new opportunities, and to launch incredible Missouri-made product across the USA, and eventually the world."
