“Since COP15 in 2009, Hub Culture has hosted over 60 Pavilions and spaces around the world to connect and engage COP delegates, business leaders, civil society and the general public around key climate and sustainability topics. We’re pleased to provide our partners with unique, dedicated spaces to collaborate and host events — from intimate bilateral meetings to large-scale, impactful receptions,” said Stan Stalaker, Founder and Chief Strategy Officer of Hub Culture. “We offer partners high impact brand visibility during the global climate summits, private workspaces in prime locations, social media content creation and amplification, and exclusive concierge and hospitality services.”

Partners of Hub Culture’s COP27 Climate Pavilion will also enjoy special access to exclusive events, including: networking cocktails and roundtable discussions, special access to a late night soirée and DJ set at Buddha-bar with a focus on the climate community, and a small group curated experience to Luxor and Aswan on the Nile, beginning at the pyramids in Cairo.

About Hub Culture:

Celebrating 20 years in 2022, Hub Culture is a pioneering technology ecosystem network focused on building the frameworks for the first virtual state, with a mission to enhance collective consciousness. The ecosystem includes five major pillars of activity: physical and digital collaboration hubs, digital assets, metaverse, governance and digital identity services. As the world’s longest continually running social network, Hub Culture provides members both tools and opportunities to support self-actualization. Ven, Ven Oxygen, and Ven Carbon, coming in November 2022, tie support of nature to the economic fabric of the community, while diverse Ultra Digital Assets offer new ways for marketplaces to interact in the interest of the community. Governance solutions like Propel and Coalition are supported by Zeke, a system-wide artificial intelligence. Members navigate these tools with user-owned data managed through HubID, their unique digital identity. Over 70,000 guests in 60 Hubs have helped members create value in dozens of cities, with hundreds more online hubs enabling real time collaboration between members. Learn more at www.HubCulture.com.
