Darren Marks, Chairman & CEO, Grom Social Enterprises, Inc

Grom Educational will immediately begin to offer Radix TeacherView along with its NetSpective web filtering solution, a product schools rely upon to protect students from harmful internet content. Radix TeacherView, a cloud-based classroom management solution, is equipped with a built-in video conference system to enable remote (at home), local or hybrid learning with a click of a button. The program gives educators an "over the shoulder" teaching experience to oversee an enhanced learning experience.

Among Radix TeacherView key features include:

- The ability to use a multi-user whiteboard for collaborative learning
- Share screens and video cameras for students and teachers
- Distribute content from cloud/local drive and share websites
- View thumbnails of students' screens in real time
- Lock screens to maximize attention and keep students on task
- Respond silently to "hand raises."

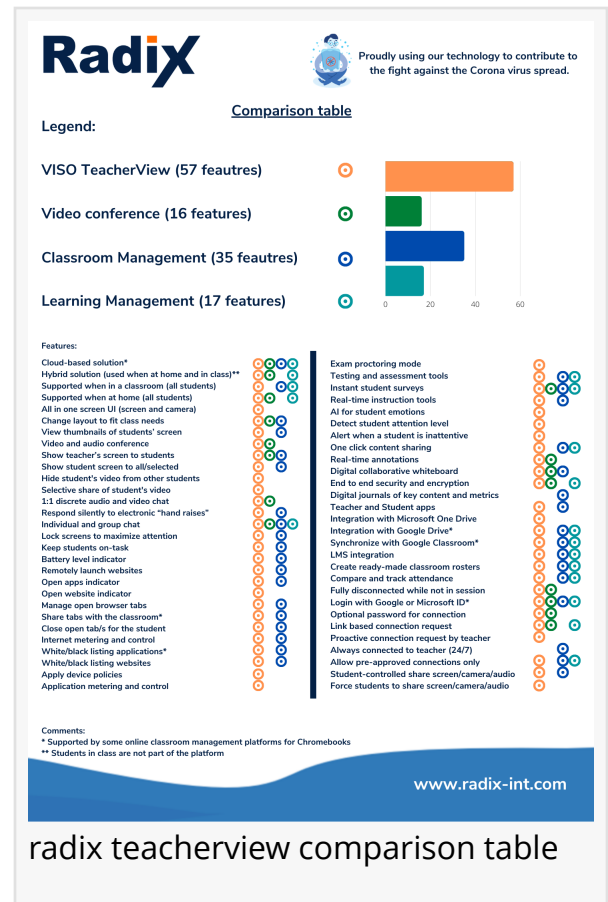

"As educators continue to navigate the uncertainties of in-classroom teaching, they require workable options such Radix TeacherView for classroom management," explained Marks. "Our mission for Grom Educational Services is to provide easy, effective classroom solutions for educators, while promoting online safety and good digital citizenship with their students. We are thrilled to be partnering with Radix to achieve both of these goals."

Built to scale, Radix TeacherView provides teachers with the tools they need to have a seamless experience of a traditional physical classroom virtually. The solution allows for video camera monitoring of students' desktops in real-time and the ability to virtually walk between students and engage in one-on-one or group collaboration. Whether teaching remotely, in school or a hybrid of both types of classes, TeacherView allows teachers to focus on teaching, while streamlining the learning experience and keeping their finger on the classroom pulse.

Since 2014, Radix has been a leading provider of cutting-edge device management solutions, consolidating all the organization devices, related work processes and stakeholders in one easy-to-use management platform.
