UNITED KINGDOM, November 3, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Author David Pullar invites his readers to return to Dundee in the 1970s to meet his family, see the hijinks he had during his youth, and have a barrel of laughs. "Stewed Balloons and Custard" whetted his appetite for rating author's second book, "Strathmanor," that will tell the story of a shy young lad who ventures to a new town for a highly paid job. Here, the author depicts the experience of being away from home for the first time and how the lad handles his newfound wealth and freedom, becoming a new man and having fun chasing all the girls in town until!!!

As for the inspiration for his works, Pullar explains how he got the drive: "After being in the hospital for some time, I cast my mind back to when I was younger and healthy. After I had written it all down, others read it, enjoyed it, and encouraged me to publish it."
