-- STS Education and Esports

Performance Academy announced today that the companies have entered into a strategic partnership that will allow them to empower educators wishing to bring Esports programs to their schools.

The agreement brings together the K-12 Education technology focus of STS and the Esports/Training focus of EPA.

Partnering with EPA allows us to bring a full-service solution to K-12 districts”

"Partnering with EPA allows us to bring a full-service solution to K-12 districts", said Taryn Masaros, Esports Manager at STS Education. "Many times, schools build the facility but then do not have a plan for how to use it. EPA allows us to offer that service to our Esports partners."

Customers of STS Education will now be able to come to STS as a one-stop shop for all their Esports needs.

"Building an effective esports program is extremely involved and requires a lot of different components," said Andrew Cooley, CEO of Esports Performance Academy. "From the exploration meeting through the execution phase, we strive to provide a high-quality experience for the students and institutions we collaborate with. We wanted to find a partner that sought to facilitate the same with their spaces and hardware. We found that through our work with STS."
