Epicvin's vehicle history reports continue to expand, with the addition of vehicle emissions information.

ST. NORTH MIAMI BEACH, FLORIDA, USA, November 3, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Epicvin's vehicle history reports continue to expand, with the addition of vehicle emissions information. The company has continued to exceed its growth goals in the third quarter of the year. Already the market leader in vehicle history reports, EpicVIN has expanded its dealer and consumer services in 2022, including launching mobile vehicle maintenance and repair support, lead generation tools for dealers, and upgrades to its online vehicle marketplace cars.epicvin.com.

EpicVIN history reports 'go green'

In addition to securing a free vehicle history report from any mobile device, car shoppers will soon see more information on each report. An industry leader in vehicle history reports, EpicVIN continues to expand the service, including making it easier to add information to the reports and save and access them securely.

In addition, EpicVIN is continuously adding new data to its vehicle history reports and making their format more user-friendly, including adding data visualization tools. In a recent addition, emissions data for 500,000 vehicles in Washington state is now available by entering a vehicle's VIN number. A vehicle emissions test checks a car's exhaust system to ensure it meets specific environmental standards. The test is required in some, but not all U.S. states.
