“The CareTrack Health team looks forward to meeting many impactful physicians throughout the state who can implement our patient adherence platform to keep patients healthier while benefiting doctors and practice staff,” CareTrack Co-founder and CEO Andrew Mills said. “GAFP is a great organization, and we want to increase awareness of its members to help them provide the best care available for Medicare patients across the state.”

The GAFP represents family physicians in Georgia with approximately 3,200 members and comprises active, retired, and family medicine residents along with Georgia medical students interested in family medicine. The GAFP is Georgia’s only medical society devoted solely to primary care.
