Packaging plays a key role in ensuring safety and resilience across supply chains. Multilayer flexible packaging is a relatively new and trending packaging process that uses non-rigid, somewhat sustainable materials, enabling more cost-effective and customizable options. This packaging is highly efficient and cost-effective, made from plastic, paper, aluminium foil, or certain materials made from chemically recycled materials. Multilayer flexible packaging is commonly used for making bags, pouches, sachets, wrapping films, and laminates and is gaining traction across various sectors such as food and beverages, pharmaceuticals, cosmetics, personal care, home care, electrical and electronics, textiles and apparel, and automotive sector.

Growing awareness about harmful effects of non-sustainable packaging material, rising focus on developing durable and reusable packaging solutions, and increasing investments in developing eco-friendly multilayer flexible packaging solutions are key factors expected to drive global market growth going ahead.
