About Jamal Hansen (INFJ Kenzo)

INFJ Kenzo is an artist on another level because he makes music that moves people. He was 16 when his life changed after helping to save one of those who needed it most: A girl overdosing from fentanyl addiction. After this experience, something triggered in him – realizing what matters most are your loved ones and others around you- which led INFJ Kenzo to become a Rap artist charged up by energy for change while still holding onto hope. INFJ states, "I care more about the people around me and building them up than anything, which is why I'll never live up to my talent. It's not about me at all. But truthfully, I love the journey. Smell the roses, enjoy what makes life worth living."

Hip-hop is often about breaking boundaries and doing something different, but it's more than that for Kenzo. The sound he unleashed in January 2022 was unlike anything hearing ears had heard before - dark yet still catchy like a psychoanalysis of the darkest parts inside himself; soon after releasing his first song, "Overblown," INFJ Kenzo landed collaborations with some very talented people such as Critically Acclaimed Death Row Records E.P Darren Vegas. From dark and disturbing to honest, faith-based rap with plenty of organic instrumentation that steers clear for any labels or genres, Kenzo's musical seed has blown up in only one year since its debut. INFJ Kenzo has had unprecedented success in the music industry, with over 10 million views in 80 countries within nine months of releasing the album. To add to his music accolades, he is also a Senior English literature Major studying Latin & Greek at his Lutheran university and managing his brand, OTAON x Entertainment, and its subsidiaries OTAON x Streetwear. With one eye on the prize, he plans to create great jobs to help people around him achieve their goals while giving them value in return. He states, "I care more about the people around me and building them up than anything, which is why I'll never live up to my talent. It's not about me at all. But truthfully, I love the journey. Smell the roses; enjoy what makes life worth living."
