How Netsweeper's Web Filtering Can Help ISPs Meet Their Regulatory Requirements

Governments around the world are looking to exercise their digital sovereignty. Governments are looking to enforce the same laws they have offline but in the online space. ISPs will need to implement tools to support government goals, or they will be mandated to do so as is already the case in many jurisdictions.

"As we know, each country has their own jurisdictions, they have their own laws, they have their own religions, they have their own values. So, trying to enforce laws on the internet by jurisdiction is what Netsweeper can help countries with. We can put a jurisdictional ring around your country and manage the specific laws that you feel are a better way to move forward with when it comes to values and inappropriate material." — Perry Roach, CEO of Netsweeper.
