It's no surprise that Llewellyn has made a name for himself with a Tantric Sexuality album racking up over 10 million views on YouTube; listeners say it's like "a shamanic journey to another dimension" and "the most sensual music I have ever heard."

Llewellyn also released the full-length album titled Free Love. The 20-track collection included hits such as A Beautiful Thing.

Explaining the origin of his name Llewellyn and career pathway, he said: "My family tree traces back to the last Native Prince of Wales, Prince Llewellyn.

"Music wasn't the obvious choice for me coming from generations of physicians, including my grandfather who was an honorary physician to the Queen, but I have lived and breathed music all my life with early eclectic influences including everything from James Last and Elvis Presley to country, rock, pop, and punk fuelling my ambition to find fame. I guess my journey proves that you don't have to be a pop artist to achieve success, you simply have to set aside your ego and avoid a hedonistic life!"

Llewellyn is the director of Paradise Music Ltd — one of the biggest producers of relaxation and healing music in the world. The success of this venture has given him creative freedom to return to song writing garnering playtime on radio stations including BBC Bristol, BBC Midlands, and BBC Wales.

As a painter, Llewellyn describes himself as a 'Revelationist'. His abstract landscape paintings have a beautiful otherworldly quality. His palette is often rich with colour choosing iridescent and metallic acrylics. Incorporating various innovative mixed media, Llewellyn's art is also wonderfully textured creating 3D like images that literally shine and emanate energy. His work will be exhibited at The Edinburgh Art Fair 2022 at the O2 Academy which runs from 17th November to 20th November.
