The report also includes competitor and regional analysis, and contemporary advancements in the global market.

Visual Effects (VFX) Market

The global visual effects (VFX) market is expected to exhibit a CAGR of 8.79% during 2022-2027. Visual effects (VFX) aid in creating, altering, or enhancing the live-action media to incorporate results that could not be captured during live-action filming. They assist in creating special effects, such as fire, creature creation, explosions, and destruction of objects. VFX consists of several techniques, including animation, modeling, matte painting, compositing, etc. They assist viewers in understanding the story precisely and enable filmmakers to add a sense of scale to the experience. As a result, VFX finds widespread applications in movies, advertisements, TV shows, and games across the globe.

We are regularly tracking the direct effect of COVID-19 on the market, along with the indirect influence of associated industries. These observations will be integrated into the report.

Visual Effects (VFX) Market Trends:

The escalating demand for high-quality video content in filmmaking is among the primary factors driving the visual effects (VFX) market. Besides this, the rising utilization of cloud models, including the pay-as-you-go model, elasticity in terms of storage, fast tape processing facilities, higher availability, and sharing of work, is further augmenting the market growth. Moreover, the growing popularity of advanced technologies in VFX software, such as virtual reality (VR), artificial intelligence (AI), and machine learning (ML), is also catalyzing the global market.

Apart from this, the introduction of new high-resolution rendering works that are essential to produce greater quality effects is acting as another significant growth-inducing factor. Furthermore, the elevating need for 3D-UHD animated movies in theatres and the emerging trend of digital platforms like Hulu, Netflix, and Amazon Prime, are expected to bolster the visual effects (VFX) market in the coming years.
