The market for joint reconstruction devices would increase as the older population grew in the APAC region's China, India, South Korea, and Japan. The number of people over 65 years old is significantly increasing in the APAC region, necessitating regular use of joint replacement devices due to the deteriorating bone structures. According to the WHO (World Health Organization), the average life expectancy is 82.3 years in South Korea and 83.7 years in Japan. The market for various joint reconstruction devices is anticipated to rise over the next 5-7 years as a result of an ageing population who are more likely to suffer from musculoskeletal ailments.

The report further studies the key companies operating in the industry and their company profiles, product portfolio, expansion strategies, and strategic alliances such as mergers and acquisitions, collaborations, and joint ventures, among others. It also offers insights into their market reach and global position, along with highlights about their achievements and financial standings.
