Application Infrastructure Middleware Market

Application infrastructure middleware (AIM) is a software program that acts as an intermediary among the networked operating systems and applications. It includes business-to-business (B2B) middleware, message-oriented middleware, enterprise service bus, business process management, and transaction processing monitors. It provides reliable solutions to frequently encountered issues, such as interoperability, heterogeneity, security, and dependability. As a result, AIM finds extensive application in various industries, including banking, financial services and insurance (BFSI), information technology (IT) and telecommunication, and healthcare.
