New Jersey Police Department Switches To LensLock For Police Body-Worn Cameras

ROXBURY, NJ, 07852, November 16, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- LensLock, Inc. announced today a new partnership with the Roxbury, New Jersey Police Department for a supply of body cameras. The decision was led by Roxbury Police Capt. Kevin Howell, who recommended the switch in his September 29 report to Roxbury Township Manager John Shepherd and Roxbury Police Chief Dean Adone.

In his report, Howell noted that Roxbury Police Department will save almost $80,000 over five years, and enjoy better service compared to the current provider. The department began researching body-camera alternatives after it began “experiencing issues” with its existing provider. This struggle prompted research into using LensLock, Inc. as a provider. Howell noted superior customer service with LensLock as well as a lease arrangement instead of a capital purchase were two differentiators. This switch will ultimately free up the general capital budget for the department

Lenslock was chosen due to their superior customer service, strong cloud-based server platform, no hidden fees pricing policy and ability to provide a superior platform at a competitive price.”

Captain Kevin Howell

“Lenslock had a strong reputation in other areas of the country, but the Roxbury Police Department became their first customer in New Jersey,” noted Howell. “Lenslock was chosen due to their superior customer service, strong cloud-based server platform, no hidden fees pricing policy and ability to provide a superior platform at a competitive price.”
