private insurance and residential and commercial real estate investments. In addition to the educational opportunity, students made valuable connections and contacts throughout the industry, both from exhibitors and fellow attendees.

"We were honored to bring such valuable information to our Real Estate Winners," Richard Álvarez, CEO of Ganadores IBR said. "Making contacts in this industry is critical to success. My passion is to support the Latino community and help our fellow Hispanic real estate investors to develop partnerships with leaders who will assist them on building their futures."

The IBR Winners Summit is an extension of Gandaores IBR's real estate investment training and mentorship program, which is designed specifically for Latino communities throughout the United States. This year's event speakers included Joaquin Toro, Marco Alfaro, Arturo Borges, and Richard Alvarez. Some of the event's most popular sessions included How to Finance Commercial Real Estate, Making Friendships, and How to Build a Winning Team.

This year, Ganadores IBR has expanded its organization with an increased staff and a new location for their Orlando, Florida headquarters in order to fulfill the increasing demand of new candidates wishing to enter its program. To date, Ganadores IBR has mentored over 4,000 Latinos across 40 markets with several thousand students enrolled in its seminars and workshops.
