Key Trends In The Joint Reconstruction Devices And Equipment Market

Companies manufacturing joint reconstruction devices and equipment are using internet-of-things (IoT) enabled solutions to help monitor and collect data for joint reconstruction surgery. The IoT provides advancement in treatment, surgery, information, education, research and development. The IoT connects all physical joint reconstruction devices with internet and help in computerizing the process. For instance, in August 2020, Rejoint, an Italy based startup company engaged in orthopedics is blending 3D additive manufacturing (AM), artificial intelligence (AI), and the internet of things (IoT) with a cobalt-chrome platter that will provide surgeons the first certified 3D printed knee prosthesis made from cobalt-chrome. By using IoT-connected wearable devices, surgeons can conduct a computerized analysis of intraoperative and postoperative data collection.
