The global gaming controller market size reached USD 1.78 Billion in 2020 and is expected to register a CAGR of 8.9% during the forecast period. Increasing number of professional gamers globally is expected to drive global gaming controller market revenue growth over the forecast period. Growth of subscription gaming services and cloud gaming has created new revenue streams that go beyond the selling of game titles as well as gear. Independent game designers can create and distribute their games without the assistance of a game publishing firm. Gamers can make money through social media competitions and live streams. Hence, the number of professional gamers are increasing at a rapid pace, which is expected to increase adoption of gaming controllers among gamers and drive market revenue growth. Increasing adoption of gaming platforms is expected to further propel market growth going ahead. In addition, increasing traction of the global gaming industry and growing popularity of e-sports have resulted in significant rise in demand for various gaming controllers.
