Reminders to Live out the Gospel Through Every Day Encounters, a daily devotional that shares how vital the gospel is to spread the Gospel through one of most common means of modern communication: text messages.

The Kirkus Reviews released a review about the book in 2018. The review says: "Not long ago, a Christian might have called their children to reflect on a recent church sermon. Now, they can do the same via the ever popular text message. This devotional encourages daily reflection on the Word of God over the course of 31 days. Many sections begin by introducing a hypothetical person, identified only by a first name and a brief description—such as someone who enjoys boxing matches, a student, a homeless man, or a mother raising a child with autism. Each of their situations provides a gateway to a discussion of faith and God's plan. All sections end with brief passages of Scripture or paraphrased reminders that readers may text to a friend, family member, or other loved one; it's all meant to encourage Christians to stay present in their faith." "For those who do not know the gospel, my prayer is that the Holy Spirit will draw you to Him and regenerate your heart so that you can see the light of the gospel unto salvation," Julia says. "Take this thirty-one-day voyage to help you think again of the gospel message and to see it in the simplest daily occurrences.”
