Basel 2022, USPA Nationwide Security has redeployed superyacht security teams in Miami.

A week filled with flashy festivities takes place every December in Miami, from pop-up installations on South Beach to after parties in Wynwood. From golden hour to sunset, there is no better way to begin Art Basel than aboard a yacht overlooking the city's skyline.

There are numerous art and design fairs taking place throughout Miami during this week, creating an array of events in hotel lobbies, beach tents, bars and restaurants. Miami Superyachts offers attendees a sophisticated evening aboard a private superyacht situated close to the action of South Beach. As a result, USPA Nationwide Security has relocated its Bahamas Superyacht Security Detail to Miami.

There are several marinas that can accommodate super yachts. One such location is the Sea Isle Marina and Yachting Centre. The marina is located on the northern side of downtown Miami. The marina offers a wide range of amenities as well as large boat slips. There is easy access to Biscayne Bay and the Florida Keys from the marina, which is close to the art district.

The Epic Marina is one of the most luxurious marinas in Miami. Despite being damaged by Hurricane Irma, the facility has managed to continue to operate and is a convenient location for superyachts up to 95 meters in length. As it is located under the Epic Residences & Hotel, guests can expect to enjoy luxurious amenities. There is an on-site restaurant where guests can enjoy sumptuous meals.

One Island Park is another of Miami's leading super yacht marinas. This 125-slip marina is located in a protected bay near downtown Miami and has easy access to the Florida Keys and the Atlantic Ocean. Moreover, it is located near fine dining establishments and beaches. IGY Marinas manages the marina, which offers both long-term and commercial dockage.

The Deep Harbour Marina is another option. On a private island in Biscayne Bay, this full-service marina offers more than 100 slips for luxury yachts. There are a number of amenities and premium services available at this Miami-area marina, making it a wise choice for superyachts. As well as concrete docks and finger piers, it also offers floating piers.

Top maritime security threats that USPA's Superyacht Protection (Maritime Security Service) will address at Art Basel, 2022

Piracy has been a persistent threat to maritime security, with pirates often targeting large ships carrying millions of dollars. With the introduction of modern communications and equipment, these pirates have become increasingly sophisticated. Boat crews can benefit from maritime security training in order to better protect their vessels against piracy attacks. Human trafficking is another major threat to international maritime security. There has long been a problem with illegal immigration in the maritime industry, but with proper maritime security measures, it can be reduced to a minimum.

Another major concern is cybercrime. The electronic systems used to control a ship can be exploited by cybercriminals in order to steal valuable information. The consequences of this type of crime can be devastating, which makes it a very serious offense. To protect the vital data of the maritime industry, maritime security protocols will need to evolve as technology advances.

There is an increasing perception among criminals that the U.S. coastline is a low-risk entry point, and the presence of U.S. maritime security forces will reassure the public and deter adversaries. Moreover, this presence will improve the mobile surveillance capabilities of law enforcement agencies and allow them to take the initiative at a distance. By doing so, law enforcement officers will be able to intervene before harm is caused.

For maritime activities, global cooperation is required. This is essential to the economic stability of countries around the world as well as to the interests of the United States. In order to improve maritime security, a multilateral approach is the most effective approach. In order to achieve this goal, the United States is committed to international cooperation. Nevertheless, we must remain vigilant and work to protect the ocean resources of the world.
