Vascular Grafts Market Trends

There has been increasing awareness of the advantages of small caliber compliant vascular grafts. These are increasingly being used for the repair or bypass of coronary or carotid arteries which can play a major role in saving more lives. The development of smaller caliber grafts stimulate on-going investigations to fabricate an artificial vascular graft that has both, sufficient mechanical properties as well as superior biological performance. Collagen has long been considered a viable material to encourage cell recruitment, tissue regeneration, and revascularization, but its use has been limited by its inferior mechanical properties. According to a study by the National Center for Biotechnology Information (NCBI), it was demonstrated the feasibility of the use of novel collagen filaments for fabricating small caliber tissue-engineered vascular grafts that provide both sufficient mechanical properties and superior biological performance.
