What are the major market drivers in the wireless testing market?

The global wireless testing market is primarily driven by rising cyberattacks and fraudulent activities. Additionally, the implementation of remote working models amid the recent coronavirus disease (COVID-19) outbreak has led to a higher risk of data vulnerability. In line with this, the emergence of machine-to-machine (M2M), the Industrial Internet of Things (IIoT), and the Internet of Things (IoT) communication solutions to ensure optimal security and perform real-time machine data transfers is positively influencing market growth.

Besides this, the introduction of next-generation wireless equipment for designing interfaces, testing mobile devices, and developing multiple-antenna solutions, such as multiple-in multiple-out (MIMO), long-term evolution (LTE) advanced, and beamforming, has accelerated the product adoption rate.

Other factors, including the ongoing research and development (R&D) activities for conducting pre-conformance evaluation and improving the performance of cellular and deployed networks, technological advancements, rising usage of 5G devices, and escalating demand for wireless technology, are also anticipated to propel the market growth.
