

Art laureate and enthusiastic representative of abstract figuration

DRESDEN, SAXONY, GERMANY,
November 21, 2022 /

EINPresswire.com/ -- Abstract or figurative - for Gabriele Schmalfeldt this is not a question of faith. For her, her work is not only a passion and a destiny, but a tool of her cognition. Her work challenges the viewer to follow the painter to the painting as an object and ultimately to understand it as a sign - ideally as one that only appears when the elements suddenly come together on the canvas, a new, unknown subject emerges, which means a visual experience for the recipient.

She regards the reduction of her works, for example of a human face to coloured spots or indeterminate shadows, as her typical stylistic device for expressing herself. The art prize winner sees herself as an aspiring artist who has discovered painting for herself in recent decades.

Schmalfeldt attended various courses and seminars before she completed her professional training at the Bad Reichenhall Art Academy in 2000. There she worked with Alex Bär, Andrea Rozorea, Luise Kloos, Alfred Darda, Robert Zielasco and Matthias Kroth.

We sell art at affordable prices.”

Thomas Stephan

Her painting is deliberately simple and clear, without much symbolism. Playful, witty and charming are her reduced figures, often group representations, which she creates in mixed media mostly on canvas. Anyone who tries to look for political traces in Schmalfeldt's paintings as a viewer is mistaken. The artist has a private happiness at heart and avoids any criticism. Each unique piece is a complete thought.
