Eye Health Supplements Market Trends:

Significant hours spent on computers, tablets, and smartphones are increasing the risk of developing computer vision syndrome (CVS) and myopia. This, along with the growing geriatric population, is positively influencing the sales of eye health supplements worldwide. Apart from this, the increasing awareness among individuals about the alternatives available for preventing different eye conditions is also fueling the growth of the market. Furthermore, governing agencies of various countries are investing in clinical studies to improve the understanding of nutrients on eye health. This is anticipated to offer lucrative opportunities to market players.
