What are the major market drivers in the global beer market?

The escalating demand for alcoholic beverages among the Millennial population, especially during social and cultural gatherings, is one of the key factors driving the beer market. In addition to this, the growing brand consciousness towards imported and premium beers is further catalyzing the market growth. Moreover, the rising popularity of canned beer, owing to its several advantages, such as convenient transportation, easy handling, prolonged shelf-life, etc., is also positively influencing the global market. Besides this, numerous product innovations, including the launch of freshly brewed and on-tap beers, are stimulating the market growth. Furthermore, the inflating demand for customized and tropical flavors, such as lime, apple, pineapple, strawberry, peach, etc., is projected to bolster the beer market in the coming years.
