with delicate chimes and beats to create an ode to the femme fatale. It’s a soundscape echoing a powerful woman and her crime.

I feel so indulged in making music with these prolific talents. Terry Santiel’s influence on pop culture through the decades can not even be estimated. We all have danced to his beats!”

Top-tier talent continues to join ellee ven and her band, the Groovalution. Composer and keyboardist Jeffrey Wellington Motley has worked with Beyoncé, Mary J. Blige, Lil’ John and many others, and brings a rich musical foundation to the team. Drummer Jody Giachello, has toured with the Illusionists, Haim and Chotto Ghetto, and has long been the time keeper for ellee ven and team.

ellee ven raves, “I feel so indulged in making music with these prolific talents. Terry Santiel’s influence on pop culture through the decades can not even be estimated. We all have danced to his beats!”

In addition to the track release, ellee ven and Prodéje will also premiere the “Legs” music video. The sharp black and white contrasts of a 1920s movie compliments the track. Throughout the video production, the delicate dance of the protagonist is reflected with a classical ballerina in white. The dancer’s movement symbolizes the softness and ease before unveiling the femme fatale’s crime. The video was co-produced with long time collaborator Noé Padilla.
