Thermoset Molding Compound, or TMC, is a type of plastic resin used in the production of parts and components. This plastic is created by combining two different polymers with each other and then subjected to heat, pressure, and curing processes. The result is a solid material that can be molded into whatever shape and size are required.

Thermoset Molding Compound has many advantages over traditional injection molding plastics. It offers superior strength due to its chemical bonds that are formed during the curing process and it also has excellent thermal stability making it ideal for applications where resistance to high temperatures is required. Additionally, this type of plastic can easily be recycled as it does not contain any volatile organic compounds which make it eco-friendly. Furthermore, its high wear resistance makes it an ideal choice for use in automotive parts such as engine components or gear housings.
