The Hollywood Christmas Parade is an annual American parade on the Sunday after Thanksgiving. The L. Ron Hubbard Theatre provides the kick-off, where celebrities enter the parade and travel the 3.5-mile route along Hollywood Boulevard, down Vine, then back along Sunset Boulevard.

Radio theatre has a rich and storied tradition. Developed in the 1920s and growing in popularity over the next several decades, it’s a form of dramatic entertainment that, in its heyday, brought family and friends together as they gathered around the radio to share in thrilling adventures, raucous comedies, and compelling mysteries. Millions of listeners tuned in to listen to the broadcasts featuring the top actors of the time.

The L. Ron Hubbard Theatre, established in 1997, is dedicated to recreating that extraordinary experience for today’s audience—going back to the roots of authentic Hollywood entertainment. It was from this theatre format that Galaxy Press created a variety of radio dramas called Stories from the Golden Age, tales ranging from adventure, science fiction, and fantasy to mystery and western. These stories are appropriate for all ages and available at GalaxyPress.com.
