Combat dressing, also referred to as field or battle dressing, are the bandages used during severe case of injuries and wounds (blast and gunshots). It is always carried by soldiers during the war time. These products are sealed with waterproof pouches to keep wounds clean and dry. For instance, Emergency Bandage or Israeli bandage is a specifically designed, first-aid tool, which is used for stopping the blood flow from hemorrhagic wounds caused by major injuries in emergency situations. The bandage has an inbuilt pressure bar, which allows the person to twist the bandage around the wound once, and then change the direction, wrap it around the injured body part, to apply pressure on the wound, in order to stop bleeding.
