

OneTaste co-founder Nicole Daedone's new book, The Age of Eros, offers hope and resilience to calm a panicked world

The Age of Eros: A Manifesto of Connectivity and Consciousness

NEW YORK, NY, UNITED STATES, December 5, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Nicole Daedone's new book The Age of Eros: A Manifesto of Connectivity and Consciousness hit the shelves this month. Drawing on an intense period of contemplation, reflection and reconnecting with the earth and her own humanity over the past five years since she sold the company she co-founded, OneTaste, in 2017, Age of Eros offers a radical way forward for modern feminism: to truly embrace the power of the feminine. In The Age of Eros, Daedone urges women, women to acknowledge and revere their own innate and inestimable power. The book release coincided with Daedone's first public appearance in five years in New York City, on November 1, 2022, where she hosted Women over Dinner for approximately fifty prominent women leaders and conducted an OM (Orgasmic Meditation) demonstration and lecture in front of a group of over two hundred attendees. Daedone's second public appearance, women's dinner and live demonstration will be held in Los Angeles on December 6th, 2022.

Age of Eros heralds a new era of feminine power that eschews the politics of victimization and blame that led to the rise and subsequent challenge to the #Me-too era. Rather than casting women as captives of patriarchy, misogyny, and rape culture Daedone sees women as progenitors of a unique and untapped source of power – erotic power. Women deserve to discover that power and put it to beneficial use, not just for their own advancement, but in service of a world that has lost its reverence of the sacred and yearns for deeper human connection and harmony.

The Manifesto argues that feminism's highest purpose is to infuse the culture with the generative qualities of feminine power. Daedone's clear and forceful prose proposes a radical solution to the problems of dependency, insecurity, and fear: Women move the world by being fully who they are!

In acknowledging women for who they are, Daedone points to the power of 'Call,' a unique bioenergetic frequency emitted by women that when consciously directed attracts others to their aid and support. She warns against 'tumescence,' both a biological and psychological impedance to receiving and transmitting true love and connection; by dissolving tumescence through the practice of Orgasmic Meditation, Daedone argues, we can dissolve barriers to human connection.

There will surely be skeptics who doubt Daedone's claims, but readers with a curious mind will be delighted to discover newly published scientific studies that find increasing connections between the practice of Orgasmic Meditation, and mystical experience, reduction in trauma, and increased cognitive function. The Manifesto itself brims with the confidence and conviction of someone who has walked the path she talks about.

I'm going to tell you something that might be hard for you to hear. I'm going to ask you to consider the possibility that the way we think about things might not be completely accurate. That we might be confusing force with power, and that we might be overlooking a source of power. I learned I am more powerful than any man on earth. The only difference between another woman and me is that I know it. I have stood in front of 20,000 women. I have seen 20,000 blank faces. I have said plainly, clearly, and without hesitation, "You hold the power." And I have been met with slack jaws, glazed eyes. Every time. So, I repeated it. "You hold the power." I could feel them see me as a folly being indulged. They were no longer bored but amused, accommodating my naivete as women do. I repeated it again, and again. "You hold the power. You hold the power." They were polite. But what I was saying didn't register. Again, with increasing passion I repeated, "You hold the power. You hold the power." A flicker of recognition whispered across one face. I gave them my love. I gave them my resilience. I gave them the mantra of The Age of Eros. A Manifesto of Connectivity and Consciousness. stave off aging-related cognitive decline.

Born in California, Nicole graduated from San Francisco State University with a degree in feminist studies. The sudden and unexpected death of her father, who died in prison after having been convicted on 52 counts of child molestation, was a turning point for Nicole who at the time ran an art Gallery in San Francisco.

Nicole's life's work has been integrating ideas around female empowerment, sex and spiritual development. Her ideas spawned the founding of OneTaste in 2005 with a mission to provide people with teaching and trainings into living a desire-based life, rooted in a felt-sense of connection. In its early days – it started out as Caravan Retreats and operated as “OneTaste, An Urban Retreat Center” until 2010, the company was run by a small, passionate group of practitioners living under one roof in San Francisco.

From 2014 to 2017, the company expanded to become one of Inc 5000's fastest growing companies with five licensed centers across the US and London and smaller outposts worldwide.
