The report, additionally, examines the prevailing trends in the market, along with the macro- and micro-economic indicators.

Businesses commonly utilise a range of products in numerous cloud environments, each with a unique set of security restrictions, as they grow. Security teams employ tools like Cloud Workload Protection Platform (CWPP),

Cloud Access Security Broker (CASB), and Cloud Security Posture Management (CSPM) to protect cloud infrastructure. However, this tactic creates problems with integration and visibility. Due of how interconnected and dependant everything is, security problems and vulnerabilities are difficult to spot and fix. Therefore, the organisations need a single solution to address these issues and improve their overall security posture. The functionalities of various cloud security products like CSPM, CWPP, and CASB are integrated into a platform for cloud security called Cloud-Native Application Protection Platform (CNAPP). It promises to serve modern organisations with workloads that are cloud-native.

Key Highlights From the Report

The software segment is expected to register a significant revenue growth rate over the forecast period. The fact that cloud compliance software is hosted off-site, either by the vendor or a third party, eliminates the need for on-site installation and configuration. Cloud compliance software's initial setup is swift, especially when compared to on-premises solutions.

The audit & compliance management segment is expected to register a substantial revenue growth rate over the forecast period. Industry norms and governing laws are getting stricter as technology becomes more and more pervasive. Compliance management is essential since non-compliance can result in monetary and legal penalties, security lapses, and harm to a company's reputation.
