

The Rhode Island Roofers Debunk an Age-Old Myth; Roofers Do Work in the Winter

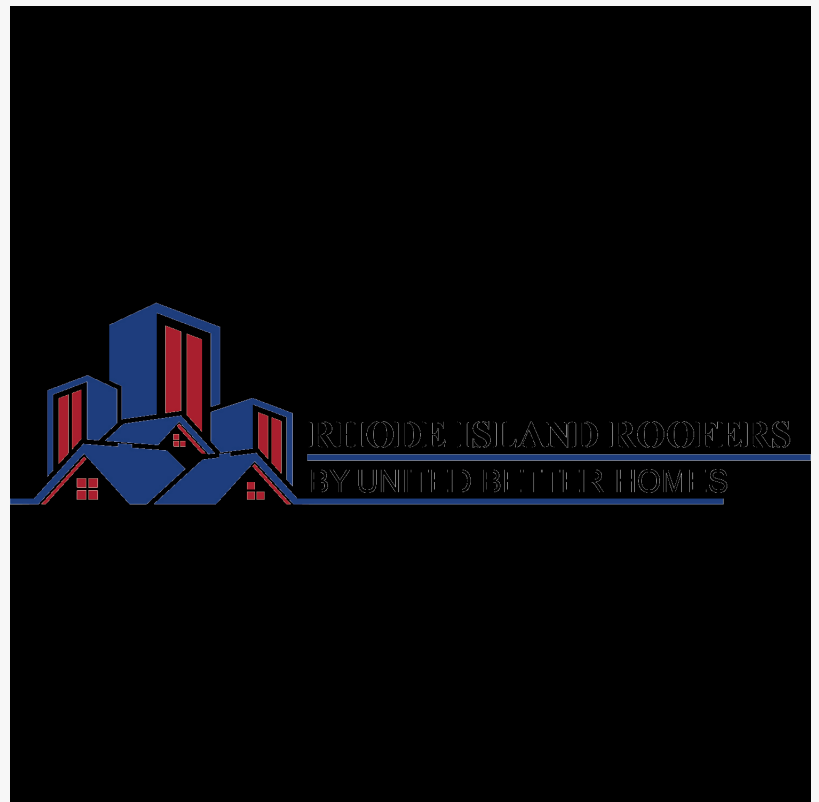

Rhode Island Roofers are speaking out and debunking an age-old myth of whether or not roofers work in the wintertime.

PROVIDENCE, RI, UNITED STATES,
December 14, 2022 /

EINPresswire.com/ -- Rhode Island Roofers, a local roofing company, is stepping out to talk about an old myth that states that roofers do not work in the wintertime. But, according to the owner, they do indeed work in the wintertime, and the myth has had people reaching out to them to see if this is or isn't true.

After getting many calls over the winter months asking if they work in the winter, The Rhode Island Roofers is educating homeowners about the fact that they work in the winter months. Roofers typically will work all year round, and they don't typically take breaks for anything except unfavorable weather that prevents them from being able to work, such as storms, snow storms, ice, and other weather that would prevent proper work from taking place.

Essentially the biggest thing to remember is that if a homeowner has a roof leak or needs roof repair, then it should be taken care of as soon as possible, and yes, this includes doing it in the winter months. Roofing companies could not take an entire seasonal break simply because of the necessary roof repairs or replacements that could happen during this time.

This age-old myth came about as homeowners began suspecting that the cold weather would put a stop to the work roofers can do. However, this is not the case at all. In fact, most roofing companies rely on winter roofing jobs to get them through the winter and into their busy season.

Although roofers' busy season is in summer and fall time, Rhode Island Roofers wants all homeowners to know that roofers do work in the wintertime although it is reliant on current weather conditions.

Roofers can work in any temperature, whether hot or cold, but they cannot work in unfavorable conditions such as ice and snow. In fact, doing any roof work during ice or snow can do more damage to the roof than good which can impede the actual roofing process and stunt work.

With this being said, the team at Rhode Island Roofers encourages homeowners to schedule appointments any time of the year but to consider ice and snow storms as these will be the conditions that will limit the working availability of the roofers.

Ultimately, homeowners can count on and expect their local roofing companies to be active and working throughout the entire year, including winter. Rhode Island Roofers encourages homeowners to trust that they are available for work all year round despite the myths that they are not.

Rhode Island roofers are available for all roofing needs all year round; whether a replacement or a repair, they are sure to get the job done at any temperature as long as the weather conditions allow it. Their address is 75 Abbott St #1, Providence, RI 02906. Those interested in roof repairs, replacements, or other roofing jobs should call Rhode Island Roofers to get a quote on their services.
