"When you absolutely, positively MustSell.com."

-- MustSell ("M\$") is a global eCommerce exchange offering priceless works of art by Van Gogh, Picasso, Chagall, rare coins, estate jewelry, yachts, autos, and antiques sold by motivated sellers of luxury items that must sell immediately. Many sellers desire to remain anonymous because of concerns for potential theft while saving on exorbitant commissions.

Private buyers prefer M$ for access to ungettable luxury items and value the 'Concierge Report' on the item's condition, authenticity, 'as advertised claims,' and market price, so they are informed before the purchase. Transactions are done anonymously and securely through the 'Concierge Premier Service,' which ensures an exceptional experience. The buyer and seller identities are verified by M$ but kept strictly confidential, so no personal information is provided to the other party, which safeguards the highest level in security, validation and authenticity.

"In just a short time, over $40 million of artwork was listed on M$," says Bob Strehlau, Chief Curator. "I told some of my longtime affluent customers about M$ low sales commission rate, concierge service and anonymity. They trust me, tried it and loved it. We now have listed dozens of original artworks by the masters."

Surprisingly, typical 'Art Evaluators' still rely predominantly on emailed pictures and provenance papers (that can be altered and falsified) to determine their authenticity. Unscrupulous sellers often claim they have provenance or documented ownership histories that they claim to confirm the authenticity of bogus art. In some cases, this concocted provenance appears to date back 100+ years, all the way back to the original artists themselves. Since paintings by the masters, such as Pierre-Auguste Renoir, are typically 100+ years old, there are rarely any witnesses to dispute their alleged provenance.

This is the reason M$ avant-garde approach to authentication is intensely investigative and highly effective. Independent forensic experts include former law enforcement and US Secret Service agents that are bonded and insured. They physically examine the actual item, then utilize technology and techniques to produce consistent scientific proof to determine if an item is authentic or counterfeit conclusively. This process ensures the authentication results are trustworthy and verifiable. Such advancements in forensic methodologies now permit provenance to include a signed certificate or statement of authenticity from respected and recognized forensic experts. This provenance methodology was used and made famous by the "Salvator Mundi," a painting of Jesus Christ attributed to Leonardo da Vinci, which became the most expensive work ever sold at auction, fetching $450.3 million.
