Rett syndrome is caused by a genetic mutation that affects 1 in 10,000 females and even fewer males. Individuals with Rett syndrome are often unable to walk or talk, experience cardiac, respiratory, digestive, and muscular abnormalities, and may develop scoliosis and seizures. There is no current treatment or cure for the disease. Children born with Rett syndrome will forever require the love and care they receive from caregivers to get them through each day. Families affected by Rett syndrome make the ultimate commitment to selflessly provide the love and support they need to survive. IRSF is dedicated to advocating on behalf of individuals and families, investing in research for curative treatments, and providing the resources and support they need.

We are thankful to Vezbi Super App's Project Seva for their generous support of International Rett Syndrome Foundation. Partnerships are critical to achieving our vision of a world without Rett.”
