After deciding to have a hair transplant, in many cases the first thing to do is ask for a price. Price is the first factor that everyone considers, but basically being solely focused on price adds a new one to the “failed hair transplant” cases. Cheap does not necessarily mean that it is bad, however expensive does not mean that it is good either. For this reason before coming to Turkey for a hair transplant, the patient should make sure of the following:

- It is performed by a dermatologist doctor plastic surgeon or a medical aesthetic expert,
- It is performed in a fully fledged clinic or hospital
- Doctor’s medical team has sufficient ability and experience
- Medical facility has international certificates that show that it is being checked regularly
- A post-operative follow-up is provided

It is evident that Turkey has become the center of hair transplant thanks to the price advantage compared with the US and European countries. However, those who noticed the increasing sector of hair transplant have started to invest in hair transplant clinics without any knowledge, medical background or any experience. This is not only about hair transplant, but also happens with other surgeries and countries. For this reason one should be careful with the mistake that we previously mentioned as “cheap – low quality” or “expensive – high quality”.

In Turkey almost none of the clinics provide their quotations based on the number of grafts – instead they offer packages with fixed prices. The method used in hair transplantation, the experience of the doctor who will perform the operation, the clinic/hospital where the operation will take place, and the features such as accommodation and transfers are the details that change the price of the "package" in hair transplant.

All the “new” techniques of hair transplant have been put into the market as if they were innovations, but in reality they are all the same and are being utilised to charge more money. FUE method is the most preferred method which has provided numerous successful results in the last years. Apart from this, alternatives such as Sapphire FUE, Manual FUE, DHI, Robotic hair transplant are not “new” methods, but alternative methods to FUE. For a successful hair transplant, a clinic with a proper specialist should be preferred. Determining the method to be applied by your doctor will lead you to achieve successful results.
