Espresso coffee is a type of coffee made by expressing a small amount of boiling water through ground coffee beans. Espresso coffee is typically consumed as a coffee shot or on occasion, with cream, chocolate, milk, and chocolate, and so on. The method of making an espresso is much faster due to the use of mechanical procedures, contains less caffeine, and has a bitter taste. Despite their lower caffeine content, espressos have a high caffeine impact due to their consumption method.

Recent Development

- In the year 2020, Luigi Lavazza S.p.A. dominated with a 15.69 percent revenue share, followed by Tchibo with a 10.77 percent revenue share.
- Starbucks Blonde Espresso was introduced in the United States in January 2018. In addition, the company claims that the new product has a mild and smooth flavour when compared to other espressos. This was the company's first new espresso product launch in 43 years.
