An experienced hardscaping contractor can provide multiple options to design and construct a custom fire pit, pool deck, paver patio, and more based on the client's specifications and expectations. As a result, many commercial and residential properties today seek patio contractors specializing in masonry to design paver walkways, patios, and other outdoor constructions that enhance the appearance and curb appeal. Besides being functional and improving the exterior's appearance, a house with beautiful walkways, driveways, and a custom patio can also help increase a property's total surface area and value. That's why many homeowners hire professional Annapolis contractors before listing their houses with real estate agencies.

Another sought-after masonry work in Maryland is retaining wall and garden wall construction. Anne Arundel County's properties with retaining walls can serve as the property's unique selling point. The façade of any structure, whether commercial or residential, can benefit from adding a garden wall, and adding a retaining wall to enclose a patio or a fire pit can offer a fantastic gathering spot for social events and special occasions. Various design and material options exist for retaining walls, ranging from keystone and brick to natural and veneer stone work. Achieving a DIY retaining wall's composition and the outcome can be tempting, but working with unfamiliar and heavy equipment poses an injury risk. In addition, miscalculations in soil type or length can have severe consequences for the stability of a retaining wall or garden wall, so awareness of these factors is essential. Therefore, hiring experienced professionals like J Gonzalez Construction when planning to build a garden wall or other outdoor landscaping and hardscaping projects makes sense.
