A Risk-Taker from Day One: Caroline has always been an adventurous risk-taker, even as a child. She took chances and seized opportunities whenever she could. As an adult, after graduating from college at 19 years old, Caroline decided to pursue her ambition of becoming an investor and entrepreneur. She wanted to specialize in investing in public equities, but there weren't many resources available for a new Gen-Z investor with a limited background and experience. Despite a small amount knowledge and funding, Caroline persisted—and it paid off big time!

The Road to Success: Caroline did whatever it took to get where she wanted to be. She discovered countless strategies within investing and trading, worked multiple jobs while building her portfolio, and put all her energy into finding success. After two years of hard work and dedication, Caroline finally launched her own hedge fund—and it was an instant hit! Her funds have grown steadily over the years due to her sharp eye for investments and long-term strategies. Her success has earned her the respect of many peers in the industry; she was even invited to speak at a prestigious conference about the future of public equity investing!
